Learning Objectives:

- ❖ to understand the importance and scope of ethics for your institution/organization and for yourself as a person,
- ❖ to understand theoretical explanations that may underlie moral institutions and differences of opinion,
- ❖ to deepen your moral imagination and improve your capacity to respond to ethical conflicts.

Presenter: Rachelle Barina, MTS, PhD(c) is an ethicist at SSM Health. In her current role, she oversees Ethics Committees across the SSM system and consults on clinical and organizational ethics issues. Rachelle also develops educational programs and resources for employees, and loves teaching students and clinicians. She is an adjunct instructor at Saint Louis University, and has taught courses including Catholic Health Care Ethics, Medical Ethics, Public Health Ethics, and Freaks and the Medical Body (her favorite!). She regularly publishes in journals of bioethics and Catholic health care ethics. Rachelle has a Masters of Theological Studies from Vanderbilt and is currently in her last year of doctoral work in health care ethics. She is originally from Milwaukee and currently resides in Saint Louis, Missouri.

Who Should Attend: This Conference brings together palliative and end-of-life care professionals, educators, students, members of professional organizations, and individuals interested in improving end-of-life care.
